

PAID PILOT · FINAL REVIEW

Custom Home Builder Authority Hub

A practical system for visibility, trust, qualified demand, and repeatable content.

THE RECOMMENDATION

Keep the URL. Change what it does.

- Evolve /marketing-agency-for-builders/.
- Preserve useful proof and existing page history.
- Make it the center of a custom-home-builder topic cluster.
- Do not launch a competing core page.

1 pillar · 3 subpillars · 9 articles

THE BUYER PROBLEM

A year-long build can lose trust in minutes.

- Buyers are evaluating risk, communication, investment, and fit.
- A gallery proves taste; a decision system proves judgment.
- Every channel must answer the next trust question.
- The CTA should feel like help, not a funnel ambush.

COMPETITIVE LANDSCAPE

Six agencies say they know builders. Few connect the whole system.

Diamond Specialization + long sales cycle	Lasso Productized growth system	OuterBox Depth + accountability

BigOrange opening: buyer-decision blueprint + source-backed AI guidance + human-reviewed content.

POSITIONING

Own the quality-of-lead conversation.

- Move beyond traffic and raw form counts.
- Define market, project type, investment, and timing fit.
- Connect content to sales acceptance and buyer progress.
- Use CRM outcomes only after definitions are validated.

AUTHORITY ARCHITECTURE

One hub. Three decision paths.

Strategy & positioning

Buyer journey · plan · referrals

Search & AI visibility

SEO · local · AI answers

Website & measurement

Conversion · proof · qualification

Every supporting asset links back to the pillar and forward to the reader's next question.

PROOF OF CONCEPT

The production copy is already built.

- Complete authority pillar and eight FAQs.
- Article 1: What a Custom Home Builder Website Must Include.
- Article 2: 5 Articles Every Custom Home Builder Blog Needs.
- Metadata, internal-link targets, CTA, and schema graph included.

No invented quotes, volumes, rankings, or results

AI SEARCH

No magic tag. No guaranteed answer placement.

- Keep pages crawlable, indexable, fast, and explicit.
- Publish direct answers with original expertise and sources.
- Keep entity details, authorship, schema, and visible content aligned.
- Measure observable referrals and qualified actions.

Guidance follows current official Google, OpenAI, Perplexity, and Anthropic documentation.

TECHNICAL PRIORITY

Fix the critical path before adding more weight.

01 Identify mobile LCP and request chain

03 Cut unused Elementor CSS and long JavaScript tasks

05 Re-test mobile, accessibility, forms, schema, and tracking

02 Replace critical-path video/slider with a light poster

04 Delay nonessential third parties

EDITORIAL SYSTEM

One expert hour becomes a source—not a content vending machine.

AI organizes and drafts. Janice supplies expertise. Named humans verify and approve.

DAYS 1–30

Launch the foundation.

- Complete Janice interview and apply review.
- Apply the completed Semrush priority map to page briefs and on-page targeting.
- Stage the pillar and two articles on the intended URLs.
- Address mobile performance, accessibility, schema, and tracking.
- Define qualified consultation and sales acceptance.

DAYS 31–60

Expand the cluster.

- Publish the three subpillars.
- Add local SEO, AI visibility, and marketing-plan articles.
- Launch two practical worksheets.
- Build reciprocal internal links and a case-study intake system.
- Review query, crawl, referral, and sales feedback.

DAYS 61–90

Add proof and optimize.

- Publish buyer-choice, referral, and lead-quality assets.
- Launch the first approved case study.
- Test one meaningful CTA hypothesis.
- Update the hub using real query and sales language.
- Present the quarterly authority review.
