WEDNESDAY WISDOM

What You Post Can Affect Your Custody Case

A quick post can become a long-term exhibit. Pause before sharing during a separation.

PHOTOS & TAGS

Vacation photos, location tags, and lifestyle posts can be misread in court.

TEXTS & SCREENSHOTS

Private messages and screenshots may still become part of a dispute.

COMMENTS & REACTIONS

Even jokes, comments, or angry replies can complicate a case.

Think first. Post later. Protect your peace.

THE POST

A quick post can feel harmless in the moment. During a custody matter, that same post can become a long-term exhibit.

Vacation photos, location tags, private messages, and screenshots can all be read very differently once they reach a courtroom. Even a joke or a short reply in a comment thread can complicate the story you are working to tell.

At BOK Law & Mediation Services, we help parents protect their privacy and their credibility while a case moves forward.

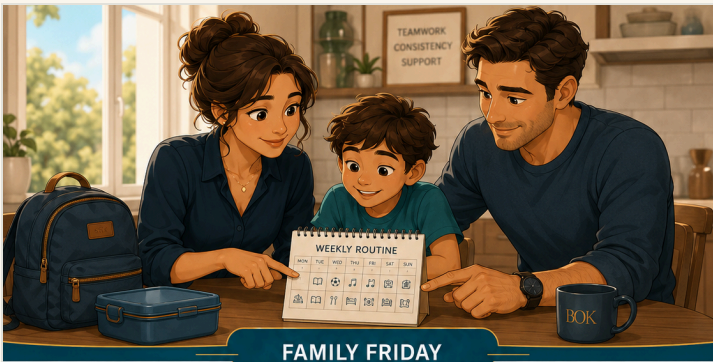

Think first. Post later. Protect your peace.

FAMILY FRIDAY

Children Do Best With One Clear Message

FAMILY FRIDAY

Children Do Best With One Clear Message

Consistency across two homes helps children feel safe, supported, and out of the middle.

ROUTINES

Shared expectations around bedtime, school, and activities reduce confusion.

COMMUNICATION

Direct, respectful updates help both homes stay aligned.

REASSURANCE

Children need to hear the same steady message from both parents.

One child. Two homes. One steady message.

THE POST

Children can adjust to living in two homes. What they struggle with is two very different sets of rules.

Shared expectations around bedtime, school, and activities take the guesswork out of the week. Direct, respectful updates keep both households working from the same information. Steady reassurance from both parents tells a child they are safe and out of the middle.

At BOK Law & Mediation Services, we help families build parenting plans that keep children supported in both homes.

One child. Two homes. One steady message.
